

Brief for Commissioning an Illustrator for the Council for British Archaeology Home Front Legacy 1914-18 project

The Council for British Archaeology Home Front Legacy Project

www.homefrontlegacy.org.uk is working in partnership with Historic England to develop teaching resources for schools.

These resources will enable schools to further their interest and promote their participation and engagement in mapping and recording the history of their local area, in the First World War.

At this stage we are seeking to work with an illustrator to originate and produce the following: -

1 An “imagined” panoramic vista of a First World War Home Front Landscape to contain a number of First World War site types, for example a hospital, a recruiting office, a munitions factory, a farm, an accommodation hut, etc. We would provide the list and photographic images to work from. There would be in the order of 30 site types to create simple pictorial images of, to locate in this landscape.

The completed work would be of a size that could be printed out in A3 sections, for display on a classroom wall or for use as a “hands-on” teaching resource, and would work well in either black and white or colour.

Both civilian and military site types will be represented. Accuracy is essential. The style must appeal to children and young people and we would wish to test several examples of different styles with our audience.

Two versions would be produced, one with labels the other without, enabling labels to be added as part of the teaching resource.

2 We would also like to reproduce the same site types in a template format, each site type one A4 template, so they can be printed out and folded. This would enable a class of children to create a 3D version of a Home Front landscape. The number of templates commissioned would be based on priority and tender.
